Since April 2021, more than 50 million U.S. employees have quit their jobs, leaving organizations scrambling to attract, select, engage, and retain talent.

Talent Mobility

An Essential Defense Against the Great Reshuffling

Talent mobility has evolved beyond traditional mobility.

How is an effective talent mobility approach a critical defense in today's labor market and the future of work in cyber and technology?

Talent Mobility

An Essential Defense Against the Great Reshuffling

Organizations that harness emerging types of talent mobility are better positioned to attract and retain cyber and tech talent today.

Traditional Mobility

- Cross-training
- Linear career paths
- Planned and managed
- Functional in nature

Facilitated Mobility

- Rotations
- Structured career paths, even if not linear
- Designed upward mobility
- Capabilities and skills-based, not position-based

Geographic Mobility

- Increases ability to support on-demand work
- Removes physical location dependencies to minimize barriers to career growth, experiences
- Productivity and value as measured by results delivery vs. quality time
- Access to larger, dispersed talent pools with a mix of diverse experience, capabilities, and skills

Agile Mobility

- On-demand, need-based
- Latticed / Three-dimensional career paths
- Gig and project oriented to provide growth experiences and increase engagement
- Mix of diverse experience, capabilities, and skills
